What is FOCUS?

- FOCUS is an all-expense-paid research education and mentoring initiative sponsored by the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute (NHLBI). The one-year program begins with a Summer Institute (July 14-19, 2024) at UC San Diego, which includes in-depth training in grant writing.

Who is FOCUS for?

- The program aims to improve the long-term success of early career faculty that will broaden the demographics of the biomedical workforce in the areas of heart, lung, blood and sleep. Junior faculty and postdocs transitioning to a faculty position with a research focus centered on heart, lung, blood, or sleep disorders; health disparities relevant to heart, lung, blood, or sleep disorders; or relevant research methodologies and approaches specific to these areas are encouraged to apply. For more information on the program, potential mentors and their expertise, and eligibility criteria, visit focus.ucsd.edu.

How can I apply?

- The application process requires initial submission of a pre-application at pridecc.wustl.edu/apply. The application review date is extended to March 31, 2024, with limited spots available in the program.
